FAITH ALIVE IN '85

The Annual Meeting of the Southeast Conference will be held at Emory University on Friday, May 24th and Saturday, May 25th. The theme for our meeting this year is "Faith Alive In '85." The meeting this year will be different from any Annual Meeting that we have had in the past. This will be a year of celebration and inspiration. Dr. Fred Craddock, Professor of Homiletics at Emory will be the Keynote Speaker.

We will have workshops on such subjects as Stewardship, Youth Ministries, Evangelism, Bible Study, Prayer, Christian Education and many more.

There will be a lot of singing, sharing and praising God for all of the benefits to our churches. We even plan to have a "Conference Choir" so we hope that a lot of the choir members from our churches will attend. Since no business will be conducted at our gathering you can have as many people from your church attend as possible. The more people, the better.

There are several things we would like for you to bring besides yourselves: Bring a banner from your church. We would also like for you to bring a rock (Yes, you heard us right!) from your church yard and a small loaf of bread. Come prepared to have a good time of sharing and fellowship with others. Your church should have received brochures which include an application form. (If a larger supply is needed please contact the conference office.) Please mark the dates of May 24-25 on your calendars now.

A 100th Anniversary

The Pleasant Hill Community Church of the UCC in Pleasant Hill, TN, the Rev. Robert Peeples, pastor, has been "Serving on the Mountain for 100 Years." That service has changed many times through the various eras of the church. In its early years, through the energy, foresight, spiritual initiative, and dedication of its first pastor, Father Dodge, and the members of the church, the Pleasant Hill Academy was established. The Academy brought education not only to the children and young people but to the adults as well. There was little distinction between the service of the Academy and the service of the church. They were one. Today the church continues to serve the village of Pleasant Hill, people beyond the village, the Uplands Retirement Community and has a strong sense of mission to the World.

The 100th Anniversary will be celebrated by a series of special services throughout the year:

March 17 - The Rev. Eric A. Gass of the South Asia Office of the UCBWM, New York

June 9 - The Rev. W. Walter Hall, Muncy, PA, pastor of the church 1972-1982.

August 4 - Dr. Victor Obenhaus, Chicago Theological Seminary, Principal of Pleasant Hill Academy 1938-1944.

September 15 - Dr. Howard Spragg, New York, retired Executive Vice-President of the UCBWM

October 6 - Dr. David Stowe, New York, retired Executive Vice-President of the UCBWM.

November 3 - The Rev. Emmett O. Floyd, Atlanta, GA, Conference Minister of the Southeast Conf. That weekend a Centennial Dinner will climax the festivities of the year.

The pastor and the members of the Pleasant Hill Community Church invite the churches of the Southeast Conference of the United Church of Christ to join them in their celebration.

Dear Mr. Floyd:

This year our third grade read in our "Weekly Reader" about starving people in Ethiopia. A group of my friends and I collected money and we gave some also. I then my mother sent out a letter in the school. I then I went to the church and they gave me some and the ladies club at Jones Chapel Church gave us a $100⁰⁰ check. People at school started giving us money. Our total was $4.15 dollars. Please see that this money helps the people in Ethiopia.

Sincerely,

Dana Hobbs and the 3rd grade at Flint River Academy.

MATTHEW 5:9

JOYCE MYERS WRITES FROM CENTRAL AMERICA
-- October 28, 1984

"It's only been 10 days since my last letter; but, again, I have had so many moving experiences that this letter can only scratch the surface. You all will have to be real patient with me when I get home because there's so much I'll want to share-- for years to come!

Let me begin now with El Salvador ...While I experienced despair and yet hope in Nicaragua, El Salvador was just overwhelming. All I could think of were the earliest days of fear and oppression and violence that I had known in Angola in the 60's and early 70's under the Portuguese colonial regime and the struggle for independence.

Some Salvadoran vignettes:--

--Meeting someone from the Independent Commission on Human Rights--4 of whose co-workers have been killed by the Death Squad and 4 others disappeared--and being shown albums of hundreds of mutilated corpses, albums that families come to look at when searching for loved ones who have disappeared...

--Listening with tears overflowing to women from the Committee of Mothers whose husbands or parents or children have been murdered or disappeared...

--Then hearing our Ambassador tell us how greatly human rights have improved under Duarte... and later listening to the head of the official Salvadoran government Human Rights Commission claiming there are no Death Squads, only "occasional incidents caused by hoodlums."

--Palpable fear and terror where no one speaks without looking over their shoulder first. (How that reminded me of Angola and the secret police, PIDE).

--Visiting a church agricultural project and talking with 'campesinos' (poor farmers) about their life's struggle--without land, schools, etc.--and thinking no wonder there's a revolution underway!

--The feel of a child's hand in mine at a Baptist orphanage near San Salvador serving a few of the thousands of children orphaned and traumatized by the war (and still we send more bombs...). Children hungry for food, affection, security -- many in the last stages of malnutrition when they arrive here. My heart bled for them.

--Visiting a Roman Catholic Church serving as sanctuary for 320 refugees (displaced persons from the war zones), many of whom have lived in this dark, crowded, smelly basement for 4 years, knowing that if they step outside they will be killed as 'subversives.'

--Seeing government soldiers forcibly rounding up 'volunteers' for the army... Soldiers are everywhere and even McDonald's has two armed guards. Fear and terror abound.

--Conversations and services with brothers and sisters in Christ who through all this continue to preach and live the Gospel, as did Archbishop Romero...

--The last day we worshipped at a refugee camp called 'Fe y Esperanza' ("Faith and Hope") where the Lutheran Church is at work. We were deeply moved when we were each given a gift--a cross made in the camp and presented to us by the children. A refugee leader reminded us of our oneness in Christ and asked that together we carry the cross and work towards peace...Later, privately, he said, 'Please make your government stop sending arms. Let us go home and work and live...'

--A Salvadoran theologian challenging us to be part of the "Project of Life" rather than the "Project of Death"...

Then on to Guatemala

This too is a land of death squads and missing people but the war is more 'contained' than in El Salvador, and Guatemala City gives the illusion of peace and calm. It is a beautiful country with gentle, gracious people and bright vivid colors, but also a land in revolution...Vignettes:

--Hearing about the "Village of Widows" an Indian village where all the men and boys over 10 years of age were killed. Now the widows and children have been moved to a "model village"--which many describe as a concentration camp...

--Reading in the paper an ad with the picture of a young man labeled "disappeared" and his family's plea for information about him, adding that "he's a good boy, not involved in politics."

--Admiring beautiful Indian handwork and weaving in the old town of Antigua but realizing that the war has badly hurt tourism and so they have a daily struggle to survive.

--Appreciating the ministry of a Disciples of Christ congregation that is working with drug addicts. We listened to moving testimonies by several ex-addicts.

--Preaching at a house church (potential base community) on the edge of a huge slum with 40,000 people, the vast majority illiterate and unemployed (but fleeing war and poverty in the rural areas). This congregation will soon begin literacy work there and hopes to develop a clinic and cooperative.

--Visiting with a Christian friend whose brother was murdered by a death squad and yet who sees her mission as working with the oppressed...which may mean putting her own life in danger.

--Listening to a nun describing the plight of refugees and, when asked about the future and any hope for peaceful change, telling me, "I only see violence and more violence."

--Being told about our country's role in supporting the right-wing military regime and the oligarchy that controls the economy. In spite of our commitment to freedom and democracy, we continually choose the "wrong side"...

--Enjoying a light moment when I discovered that the hotel clerk is an avid 'Braves' fan ("it takes one to know one"!!). They get some games by satellite. We had a delightful half hour of Braves' talk!

And on that lighter note, I came on here to Costa Rica, the "Garden of the Americas," also called the "Switzerland of the Americas" a country without an army--but being pushed in that direction. For me this is the first time in almost a month with no soldiers, no military checkpoints, no gun shots in the night...but Costa Rica is suffering from economic problems (and most, or much, business is in U.S. hands) and from pressure from our government to arm themselves to "defend Costa Rica against a Nicaraguan invasion"....

My time here thus far has focused on two things--the first, becoming familiar with the Latin American Biblical Seminary and PRODIADIS (Theological Education at a Distance), CELEP (Latinamerican Evangelical Center for Pastoral Studies) and ALFALIT (Literacy and basic education)--all of which we support through OCWM--and all of which are in exciting, vital ministries.

The other focus has been a personal one--a rich, rich time of fellowship with dear friends from Angola, Ernesto and Alice Pongolola and their little girls, Celi and Laura. Ernesto was my student at the seminary in Angola and is here in Costa Rica for advanced theological studies. His deep commitment to the church--and to the people of pe Angola --really inspires me. We had hours of nonstop Angola talk this weekend!

And speaking of old friends--and what a sma world this is--I spent last evening with a good friend of Central Congregational Church Dow Kirkpatrick. We happen to be here at the same hotel. He continues to work at interpreting the reality of Latin America and the church and its mission, to folk back home.

I'm sure he would join me in saying, let us work for "peace through justice" in Latin America....

Blessings and love,
Joyce
